

Angela Coulter, PhD, Hon FRCGP, Hon FFPH

Angela Coulter is a retired academic with special interests in patient and public involvement and uses of personal health data. A social scientist by training, she has higher degrees in health services research from the University of London and the University of Oxford and is an associate fellow of Green Templeton College at the University of Oxford. She chairs Picker Institute Europe's board of trustees, is a member of DARE UK's programme board and was the founding chair of HDR UK's Public Advisory Board. Her previous roles included chief executive of Picker Institute Europe, director of policy and development at the King's Fund, director of the Health Services Research Unit at the University of Oxford, director of global initiatives at the Informed Medical Decisions Foundation and honorary professor at the University of Southern Denmark.

She has published more than 350 research papers, chapters, articles and reports and several books, including The Autonomous Patient, The European Patient of the Future, The Global Challenge of Healthcare Rationing, Hospital Referrals, Engaging Patients in Healthcare, Understanding and Using Health Experiences, A Stream of Lives, and her most recent book, Probing Deaths, Saving Lives, the story of a Victorian coroner and his inquests. She was the founding editor of Health Expectations, an international peer-reviewed journal on patient and public involvement in health care and health policy.